"Extending to the end of my toes and my brain!

"Which made me delirous!

"From agony! ! ! !

"It took three men to hold me on my bed at times!

"The Doctors tried in vain to relieve me, but to no purpose.

Morphine and other opiates!

"Had no effect!

After two months I was given up to die! ! !

When my wife heard a neighbor tell what Hop Bitters had done for her, she at once got and gave me some. The first dose eased my brain and seemed to go hunting through my system for the pain.

The second dose eased me so much that I slept two hours, something I had not done for two months. Before I had used five bottles, I was well and at work as hard as any man could, for over three weeks; but I worked too hard for my strength, and taking a hard cold, I was taken with the most acute and painful rheumatism all through my system that ever was known.

"I called the doctors again, and after several week they left me a cripple on crutches, for life, as they said. I met a friend and told him my case, and he said Hop Bitters had cured him and would me. I poohed at him, but he was so earnest I was induced to use them again.

In less than four weeks I threw away my crutches and went to work lightly and kept on using the bitters for five weeks, until I became as well as any man living and have been so for six years since.

It has also cured my wife, who had been sick for years; and has kept her and my children well and healthy with from two to three bottles per year. There is no need to be sick at all if these bitters are used. J. J. BERK, Ex-supervisor.

Prosecute the Swindlers ! ! !

If when you call for Hop Bitters the druggist hands out anything but "Hop Bitters" with a green cluster of Hops on white label, shun that druggist as you would a viper; and if he has taken your money for a bogus stuff, indict him for the fraud and sue him for damages for the swindle, and we will reward you liberally for the conviction.

Freemen Depositing Ballots in Ohio.

A Drizzling Rain Inclines to Cut Down the Vote,

But it is Considered Pretty Fair at Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo.

BATTLE OF BALLOTS.

The Election in Ohio---Raining All Over the State.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election in this city began without any disorder. Up to 10 a. m. no arrests had been made. Two causes contributed to this result—a division of the precincts so that not more than three hundred or four hundred voters are in any one and the rain which prevents crowds from collecting. All the judges are provided with printed lists of what are considered fraudulent registries and the voting is watched with care. Rain is reported almost all over the state last night and today. This will doubtless have the effect to cause a light vote throughout the state.

The rain ceased here between 11 and 12 o'clock, but the sky is not entirely clear. The vote polled at 11 o'clock showed it is fully up to the average. Good order has been maintained though drunken men are to be found about some of the voting places in spite of the state law. Rain was reported in the central and northern parts of the state at noon.

FROM COLUMBUS.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election is passing quietly with indications that a light vote will be polled. It rained all forenoon and it is believed if it should clear away the main part of the vote will be gotten out during the afternoon. Some scratching is being done on local and legislative tickets, but work of this kind it is thought will not be formidable to either side. Although some precincts were behind on the vote at noon, it is thought at that hour that half of the city has been polled. Neither state committee has any information of consequence except that rain is general and a fair vote is being polled at Toledo where the republicans claim Foraker will carry the county.

AT CLEVELAND.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election is progressing in a very orderly manner. There has been no disturbances and the new registry law seems to be a great success. Fraud is lessened and a big vote is being polled. The morning was wet and disagreeable, but notwithstanding it the electors turned out in great numbers. The democrats and republicans both claim the day.

AT COSHOCTON.

COSHOCTON, Ohio, Oct. 13.—A rainy day and light vote up to noon. The prohibitionists gain slightly in this city. The republican candidates for treasurer, sheriff and infirmary directors run ahead of the ticket and may pull through. The balance of the democratic ticket will probaby have a small majority.

A FEW FACTS.

State officers, judges of the supreme court and a legislature will be chosen in Ohio to-day. The democrats, republicans, prohibitionists and greenbackers have full tickets in the field.

In 1883 three candidates were in the field for governor: Hoadly, democrat; Foraker, republican, and Schumacher, prohibitionist. The vote was as follows:

Hoadly	359 693
Foraker	347 194
Schumacher	3 562
Hoadly's majority	4 176

In the October election, 1884, the republicans carried Ohio, giving Robinson 11,324 votes over Hoadly, but not a majority of the votes cast. In November, 1884, Blaine carried Ohio by 15,351 majority.

TIMBER SPOILATION ON THE PUBLIC DOMAIN.

A letter has just been received by Commissioner Sparks from M. J. Haley, special trustee agent, dated general land office, Rathdrum, Idaho, in which he says:

"I have the honor to report that I have completed the reports in the Northern Pacific Railroad company, and the Montana Improvement company's timber trespass cases and herewith transmit eight reports, making with what I have already transmitted, thirty-one separate indictments in all, showing that these corporations have caused to be cut from the public domain 4,510,000 feet of lumber and bridge timber, 84,744 railroad ties, 15,400,000 shingles (616,000 bunches) 32,035 cords of wood and 20,000 cedar posts.

To value the lumber at $10 per 1000 feet, which would be low figures, the railroad loss at 40c per tie, the wood at $3 per cord, the posts at $80.00 per 1000, and the shingles at $2 per 1000, or 50 a bunch; the total would amount to $613,402.

A FEW NICE PLUMS.

Their standing here has made their departure a sensation. The converts have been egged and otherwise maltreated since their baptism into the Mormon faith. The best men in the county say it is time to stop their work here and if the missionaries return they may be mobbed.

At a general assembly of the Knights of Labor, in session at Hamilton, Ont., delegates who have been soldiers of the federal and confederate armies formed an organization to be known as "The Gray and Blue of the Knights of Labor,' the object being to promote peace instead of war, and to establish the sentiment among the toilers of the rank and file, that peace, not war, is the toiler's emancipation.

The election in Ohio to-day is favorable to democratic success, inasmuch as Hoadly defeated Foraker at a former election. The municipal election at Indianapolis also attracts attention There the republicans have a majority. Both campaigns were conducted on a "whisky" platform and that sort of campaign material is just a little tiresome. Liquor dealers should obey the existing laws and drive the question from public attention. A political party cannot certainly hope to survive long on a purely "whisky" diet. Personal liberty is all right, but it is not all we live for. A little law and order is not bad.

Palmer has been giving his following some good advice on the subject of boycotting, the prevalence of which has recently been carried to an intemperate extent in Ireland. Speaking in Kildare, Ireland, he referred, in terms of the highest praise, to Archbishop Walsh and Croke. The former, he said, was one of the strongest supporters that Providence had given Ireland, while Archbishop Croke's services were known to all. The stand they have taken proved the union of the priests and the people. In regard to boycotting, he said the practice was pursued independent of the Irish leaders; indeed, they disfavored it and regarded it as barbarous and socialistic.

A prominent society gentleman of Indianapolis was for a few days the guest of Hon. Horace P. Biddle, and returns with a glowing report of that gentleman's life and surroundings. The old judge devotes his time to study and comfort, and is represented as the favorite af all his neighbors, old and young. He owns a library of about 10,000 volumes, and in it may be found all early documents pertaining to Indiana, as well as a perfect file of the leading papers and periodicals of the country, The judge's latest invention is a new stringed instrument, from which he extracts very beautiful music. He has also just finished a very learned essay upon the literature of Prussia. The judge is very fond of society, and especially that of young people, and it is his habit, whenever he becomes lonesome, to elevate an immense lamp at the top of a high pole erected in the center of his island, which is a signal for all his friends to call, that his house will be open.

The warm weather often has a depressing and debilitating effect. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes all languor and lassitude.

Professional beauty on the Pacific coast finds lucrative employment as a pretended illustration of the merits of a patent medicine. A wonderfully lovely young woman travels in the chariot of a vender of medicine, which, he declares, caused the perfection of her complexion. He sells a tonic, too, to which he attributes the abundance of her hair, and drugs for the increase or reduction of flesh to her standard.

A DIFFERENCE OF $39,999.

From Indianapolis News.

Surely it would seem that such an amount as this is worth saving. General Grant's physicians are talking about $40,000 as the proper figure for their medical services. At the very outset it was criticised as being some dollars in excess of what the services were probably worth.

Exactly how much these medical gentlemen have done for Grant, it is beyond the power of human knowledge to say. They probably did the best they could and when they found he did not die, as they said he would, they, with profound wisdom, announced that if he did not die then, he would die some other time and that it was only a question of time. The same is true of everybody, sick or well, and it does not require a great deal of medical knowledge to see it.

But suppose they had given General Grant a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, which would have come to just one dollar? It might have done him quite as much good as all the treatment he has had. Certainly it would have worried him and pained him less. And then think of the saving! A matter of $39,999.

A great many people are now attending to their own cases instead of employing expensive physicians. This is not because they lack respect for the physicians; but because they sometimes find the physicians a little uncertain as well as costly, and from increasingly happy experience of the general public, they find that Brown's Iron Bitters can always be relied upon.

For instance, the case of a gentleman well known in Indianapolis. Mr. C. J. Ioor is salesman for Fred Shrader, the popular boot and shoe dealer, of 65 West Washington street. He has a good constitution and a cheerful disposition. What did Mr. Ioor do when a few months ago he found himself a dyspeptic? Did he engage costly physicians to give him a daily diagnosis and to prescribe for him medicines the titles of which had to be written out for the druggist in doglatin, for fear the patient might know what stuff it was that he was taking? Got he. He did better than that.

The writer had the pleasure of calling on Mr. Ioor. That gentleman said, in response to queries as to dyspepsia and its cure: "I had been enjoying good health until some time ago I found myself running into a dyspeptic condition. My food would not digest with comfort and I had much oppression and pain after each meal. I was not laid aside from my business here, but I think I ought to have been: for I was dragging myself into a daily martyrdom of pain and bad feeling. It was about three months ago that for just an experiment I tried Brown's Iron Bitters. I had heard of it among some of my friends, doing them good. I have no longer any dyspeptic symptoms, for this medicine has taken the whole thing away. It is the finest tonic I ever knew. I keep it in the house and still take it, and I would not on any account be without it."

Mr. Ioor is just as well to-day as if he had spent $40,000 on physicians, and probably he is better with the satisfaction, besides, of having saved his money. His recovery from the evils of dyspepsia affords a valuable hint to all invalids who are spending their money in vain, who have not yet made trial of Brown's Iron Bitters.

At 94 Michigan avenue, the writer called on Mrs. Newton, wife of Engineer Newton. She too had been suffering from dyspepsia, and from a disordered liver, and had, instead of going to the doctor, pursued the plan of using Brown's Iron Bitters. "The result," said she, "was all I could have desired or expected. I am all right now, and Brown's Iron Bitters made me so."

This way of getting cured is as simple as it is reliable. The cost is small. the process is easy, and the result is delightful. Brown's Iron Bitters, which you can buy in its genuine purity of any druggist, cures dyspepsia, headache, nervous prostration, debility, pains in the back, liver troubles, and many of the ailments which are peculiar to ladies. It is the best and the most popular of all family tonics, its popularity being based on actual merit.

Sweden has become the fashionable hunting-ground of Europe.

Miss Lillie Curtis, an accomplished young lady of Bellevue, Ind., some months ago thought she was doomed to die. In a short time she was reduced from a handsome, blooming, healthy girl to the mere shadow of her former self. Dyspepsia was her complaint, and everything was tried to restore her to health but without avail. The doctors were baffled. Then a friend informed them of a marvelous cure that had been effected in a neighboring town by Mishler's Herb Bitters. Some of the medicine was purchased by Mr. Curtis, and in a few months he had the pleasure of seeing his daughter restored to health and beauty.

Frightful Case

Of a Colored Man!

I contracted a fearful case of blood poison in 1883. I was treated by some of the best physicians in Atlanta. They used the old rededies of mercury and potash, which brought on rheumatism and impaired my digestive organs. Every joint in me was swollen and full of pain. I was in a horrible condition; when I had been given up to die, my physicians, who had seen the workings of the medicine in other cases, thought it would be a splendid time to test the virtues of Swift's Specific. When I commenced taking S. S. S. the physician said I could not live two weeks under the ordinary treatment. He commenced to give me th medicine strictly according to directions, which I took for several months. I took nothing else, and commenced to improve from the first. Occasionally I would have a backset from imprudence. Soon rheumatism left me, my appetitte became all right, and the ulcers, which the doctor said were the most frightful he had ever seen, began to heal, and by the first of October, 1884, I was a well man again. I am stronger now than I ever was before, and weigh more. I have not failed to report for duty since that time, being engaged in the oil warehouse of Chess-Carley Company. I have been, and still am, doing some of the hardest work any man ever did, and am ready to answer any question that may be asked concerning this cure. Swift's Specific has saved me from an early grave.

Lem McClendon.

Atlanta, Ga., April 18, 1885.

Lem McClendon has been in the employ of the Chess-Carley Company for some years, and I know the above statements to be true. At the time he began taking Swift's Specific he was in a horrible condition, and at my solicitation his treatment with S. S. S. was undertaken by a physician after several others had declared his case to be hopelessly incurable. He took nothing but S. S. S., and has been as sound as a new dollar for several months. I regard his cure almost miraculous.

CAUTION!

Consumers should not confuse our Specific with the numerous imitations, substitutes, potash and mercury mixtures, which are gotten up to sell, not on their merit, but on the merit of our remedy. An imitation is always a fraud and a cheat, and they thrive only as they can steal from the article imitated.

A LAND ALMOST UNKNOWN.

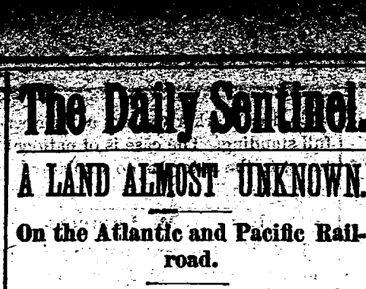
On the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad.

A TRIP TO THE ZUNI COUNTRY.

Hospitality of the Civilized Indians and a Visit to the Cliff Dwellings.

THEY WERE WINTER HABITATIONS.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., May 15.—The completion of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad between Albuquerque and the Needles opens a tract of country heretofore little known and difficult of access. Enormous canons, deep craters, towering palisades, and widespread lava beds may be seen from windows of the cars. The tourist should spend at least two days at Albuquerque, and visit the old town about two miles from the depot. It is easily reached by the street cars. The old adobe church, a veritable antique still in daily use, is well worth a visit. A visit to the Indian school, a mile further out, will be well repaid. The school is supported in part by the Government and conducted by the Presbyterian Board. It numbers about seventy pupils, and appears to be well conducted.

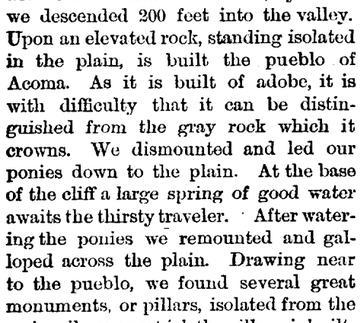


ADOBE COMMUNAL DWELLING.

Taking a train for the west, we soon come in view of the pueblo or village of Lagunda, to the right of the railroad, and built upon a rocky eminence without verdure of any kind. The adobe communal dwelling, two and three stories high, is accessible by ladders. There are no doors upon the ground floor. It is a strange sight, and the strange people who swarm about the dwelling, partially dressed in buckskin and blankets of their own manufacture, form a picture not soon to be forgotten and sure to create a desire to know more of their customs and their ancestors.

A few miles further on we reach McCarty's Station. The pueblo of Acoma is twelve miles from this station. It is one of the most accessible and interesting in New Mexico. Mounted upon an Indian pony, we galloped over hill and plain until we reached the Acoma valley. It is a wide canon from two to three miles wide. Its sides are almost perpendicular, with here and there narrow defiles and trails, by which we descended 200 feet into the valley. Upon an elevated rock, standing isolated in the plain, is built the pueblo of Acoma. As it is built of adobe, it is with difficulty that it can be distinguished from the gray rock which it crowns. We dismounted and led our ponies down to the plain. At the base of the cliff a large spring of good water awaits the thirsty traveler. After watering the ponies we remounted and galloped across the plain. Drawing near to the pueblo, we found several great monuments, or pillars, isolated from the main pile upon which the village is built. They measure from thirty to eighty feet in diameter, and are from 100 to 200 feet high. These great columns are sandstone. They are fast disintegrating and wasting away. Upon a similar eminence with a level top of about two acres, is built the pueblo. Excepting on the southern side, the walls are so nearly perpendicular as to be inaccessible. The sand drifts badly on the southern side, and reaches half way up the cliff. Over the hot sand we climbed until we reached a narrow trail leading to the top. The path is only wide enough for one animal. In some places steps have been cut in the rock to secure a foothold.

From the plateau we had an extended view up and down the valley for many miles. The towering monuments below looked like sentries on guard at the entrance of this strange village. The original builders, we are told, selected this site that they might the more easily defend their homes. In the plain broken patches of beans, corn, and pumpkins were seen. The iron age has not reached this people yet. The most primitive wooden plough is still in use, and a sharp stick is used in planting the seed. Large flocks of sheep and goats were quietly grazing there, guarded by



KNOWING YOU WOULD WANT WATER, I BROUGHT IT FROM THE POOL.

Indian boys and girls. A few cattle were in sight. In the evening about 100 "burros" were driven up the narrow trail and carefully corralled in an old adobe churchyard, built about 100 years ago by Romish priests. In a corner of the church our guide had a few goods stored for trade. We camped in the churchyard. The natives welcomed us warmly. Their dress and absence of dress did not impress us favorably, and the prevailing fashion of hanging the hair gave their plain, honest faces an ominous appearance. Their greeting was kind and courteous. A woman brought us a jar of water, saying. "I saw you coming over the plain. Knowing that you would want water when you got here, I went to the pool and brought it for you." When you here that she had to go in the hot sun nearly half a mile down the steep, rough rocks to reach the pool, and that the jar held two gallons of water, you can appreciate her act.

I cannot here detail the manners and customs of these people. I found them using several implements, duplicates of which have been found in the graves of the Mound Builders. I saw them grinding corn to a fine flour by rubbing it upon a large stone with a smaller hand stone. I saw the women spinning wool, twisting it with a stick or spindle, weighted with a small disk exactly like those that have been found in Mound Builders' graves in Missouri. The common, rough, discoidal stone quoits were used to crush pumpkin seed for food. In making pottery they use a soft stone, which they reduce to fine powder in the same way and with the same utensils used in grinding their corn. Adding water, they form a putty or clay. They take a mass of this putty in globular form and place it upon a small flat stone. Then, with the fingers, they form the bowl, raising the walls by pressure, and smoothing the sides with a small, smooth pebble, which they frequently wet. When the pot is formed it is partially dried in the sun, and then painted in mixed colors, which are pulverized in stone mortars, and applied with brushes made from the fibre of the yucca. When ready to bake, the vessel is set upon a rock in the open air, and pieces of dried manure are piled around and over it. The pile is fired, and the whole is soon brought to the color of a live coal. Then the coals are removed, and the vessel is rolled away from the fire to cool. It is then ready for use. These utensils are made in a variety of forms and sizes, and for domestic use. Some are nearly as large as a barrel.

Raising sheep and corn, grinding grain by hand for food, spinning wool and weaving it into blankets for clothing, and making pottery are the principal occupations of this people. Their implements, we could not expect to find more than we do, since in the moist country everything but stone and pottery decays. We find among all prehistoric remains ornaments and implements of shell and stone, with neatly drilled holes. The question is often asked, how could they drill them so correctly?

NATIVES MAKING POTTERY.

At a Acoma I saw the process. An Indian was making shell beads. He first broke the shell into rough pieces of small size. The drill was a piece of hard wood formed like an arrow, stright and smooth, about fifteen inches long by half an inch in diameter. A bit of hard stone was fastened in one end. Two strings, about ten inches long, were attached to the other end of the drill. They are tied to each end of a stick an inch wide and eight inches long, in the centre of which is a hole large enough to receive the drill. Through this hole the drill is put. Then being held in an upright position and revolved by the fingers, the strings, are wound around the drill and the crossbar raised toward the top of the drill shaft. The machine is now ready for use. Setting the drill securely upon the piece of shell, and holding the drill steady at the top, the operator seizes the crossbar in his fingers, pressing it quickly downward. The strings on the shaft unwind, causing the drill to revolve rapidly. Then, loosing the crossbar, the strings rewind upon the shaft, and another downward motion causes it to revolve rapidly in the opposite direction. In this way a constant rapid revolving of the drill soon makes a round, smooth hole. This is evidently one of the ways in which the prehistoric people drilled stones.

Passing westward from Acoma and McCarty's Station, we left Mt. Taylor on the north. It is snow-capped and 13.000 feet high. The strange geological formation of the country excites wonder and admiration. Near Grant's Station the road winds among lava beds, walled in by black and ragged ridges of lava. Lonely herders, with few cattle, are seen near the watercourses. A stray wolf or an antelope reminded us that animal life is not extinct on this lonely plain. As we approach the continental divide the valley opened southward into elevated plains, covered with a stunted but sparse growth of cedar as far as the eye could see. The road runs along the nothern side of this plain. A constant succession of red and gray buttes or palisades were on the right. They had green caps, and white ribbons marked their faces. Here and there isolated masses stood alone on the plain, with huge boulders posted on their tops.

From the summit of the divide we looked over the Pacific slope. The train rushed down the slope at the rate of fifty miles an hour. At Cooledge we stopped for dinner. Ten miles further on we left the train at Wingate, and, taking a seat in the Government mail wagon, soon reached the fort, three miles from the station. This post is upon a mountain slope which overlooks a wide expanse of broken country. A towering rock, known as "The Navajo Church," is its prominent feature.

At Gallop station we were surprised to see lines of cars loaded with coal, mined here at the rate of 200 tons per day. At Holbrook a poster marked the progress of civilization. It read:

All persons arriving in this town must immediately divest themselves of all weapons, or subject themselves to arrest or punishment according to law.

Sixty miles further west we dashed over the Canon Diablo, a fearful chasm in the level plain, 222 feet deep and 540 feet wide, spanned by an iron bridge. The remorseless advertiser has already disfigured the walls of this canon with his paint brush.

Thirty miles farther on we came to Flagstaff, a brisk little village nestled under the shadow of the San Francisco Mountains. It takes its name from a pole which a pioneer has set near his cabin. We were then in a delightful country, about the same altitude as the city of Mexico. Snow-covered mountains, 13,000 feet high, cooled the heated atmosphere below. Beautiful natural parks, covered with a rich growth of gramma grass, were skirted by a handsome growth of heavy yellow pine timber. An eastern firm has built a sawmill here and is shipping lumber to Los Angeles and to Mexico. A drive of eight miles southeast from Flagstaff brought us to an enormous canon, into which we descended by a rough pathway. We reached a ledge about half way to the bottom. Turning to the left we saw the famous cliff dwellings. Across the deep chasm, up and down the canon on either side, and as far as the windings of the canon will permit, we saw these queer human habitations. After looking at the walls we dug with shovel and trowel in the earthen floors, hoping to find something. A lower ledge varies in width from three to twenty-five feet, and upon the wider spaces the dwellings are located. A rough wall of clay, extending to the ledge above, forms the front and two ends of the primitive dwellings, a doorway being left in the front wall. The rooky ceilings are blackened by smoke and the crevices in the upper part of the walls are filled with pitch condensed from the smoke, which must have filled the room, as there was no chimney to facilitate its escape. The fires were built against the rear walls. The most noticeable articles found in digging were a few impliments, fragments of pottery, fabrics woven of cotton and wool, a spindlewheel of wood, a sandal of the fibre of the yucca, a cushion used upon the head for the carrying of burdens, and a small wooden bench fastened with a stone axe. All the articles found are now in daily use among the Pueb'o Indians. On the plains in the vicinity are remains of stone walls, probably dwellings, about which we found grindstones and broken pottery in abundance, which corresponds exactly to those found in the cave dwellings near by. There is satisfactory evidence that the people who inhabited these plains and left these ruins of stone dwellings and pottery were the same people who occupied the cliff dwellings, and that they were identical with the Pueblos. They certainly raised sheep and corn, and spun both wool and cotton. I saw no evidences of their being a warlike people. The cliff dwellings were not adapted for defence from enemies, but were more comfortain winter, as they were protected from cold and winds. They certainly could not have been as convenient for common use as the dwellings on the plains. I believe that they were simply a winter resort for those who lived in the plains in summer.

About eight miles northeast of Flagstaff, isolated in the plain, stands a mountain about 300 feet high. On the south front, extending down the side about 100 feet, the volcanic rock is filled with great cavities, globular in form, like what is known among furnace men as the blowholes in pig iron, or the slag of the furnace. These cavities vary in size from six to twenty-five feet in diameter. All have circular openings, most of which must have been approached by a short ladder of steps. In many instances these openings are protected on the upper side by a rough circular wall, built half way round the opening. I counted about twenty of these openings in close proximity, all of which had evidently been inhabited. Stone implements and pottery similar to those which we found in the cliff dwellings were discovered. In almost every cave there was at least one grindstone or metatae. In all instances, however, they were broken, and, evidently, broken intentionally. In some instances the circular walls protecting the upper sides of these openings had been thrown into the openings. Several had been a long time filled up and undisturbed. There was silent evidence that an enemy had done this.

Ir ague or insanity is latent in a person it will almost always develop itself itself at sea. So Dr. Fournes-Brice concludes after studying the subject as it is revealed in the records of North Atlantic emigrant travel. Curious enough, in nearly every case the patient has been ailing, and has been recommended by his medicinal attendants to "try a sea voyage."

Some People Snore Sonorously.

Why do some people snore? Some because they are thoughtless. Some because they sleep with their mouths open. Some because their digestive system is in bad condition. Brown's Iron Bitters will not shut anybody's mouth; but it will rectify bad digestion, and produce solid comfort and consequently delightful sleep. Mr. H. P. Smith, Montgomery, Ala., writes, "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for weakness and night sweats, and it cured me."

A small boy puffed at a big cigar,
His eyes bulged out and his cheeks sunk in,
He gulped rank fumes with his lips ajar,
While muscles shook in his youthful chin;
His gills were green, but he smole a smile,
And sat far up on the farmyard style,
And cocked his hat o'er his glassy eye,
Then wunk a wink at a cow near by.

The earth swam round, but the style stood still,
The trees rose up and the kid crawled down,
He groaned aloud, for he felt so ill,
And knew that cigar had "done him brown."

While he weakly gasped as he gazed afar,
"If I live, this here's my last cigar."

NEW HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

The Members of the First Presbyterian Church Hold an Important Meeting--A Report on Business.

Pursuant to a call the members of the First Presbyterian church met in the lecture room of their new edifice, on the corner of Washington and Clinton streets, last night, to take steps looking towards the completion of their grand structure. The meeting was called to order and Mr. O. P. Morgan was made chairman and Hon. Fred J. Hayden, secretary. The financial report of the trustees was submitted and read by Hon. Montgomery Hamilton. The report shows the total cost of the building, including organ, painting, frescoing, heating apparatus, gas fixtures, carpets, church furniture, pictures, etc., (not including the cost of the construction of the grand spire contemplated) will amount to near $83,000, and when all available assets are accounted for will leave the congregation in debt about $8,000. The money so far raised came entirely from the members of the church and a desire was expressed not to solicit outside aid, and for that reason a resolution was introduced, which had been adopted by the trustees, subject to approval of the entire congregation, to empower the trustees to negotiate a loan from the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, of Milwaukee, for the sum of $20,000, to run for ten years, but payable in three if desired by the members. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The board of trustees then drew up a resolution, which was heartily endorsed, returning thanks to the congregation of the Jewish synagogue and also to the members of the Second Presbyterian church for the use of its Sunday school room. Other resolutions were read and adopted.

The assembly then repaired to the church where the handsome interior was viewed by gas light. The frescoeing is from the brush of J. Chas. Haane, of Dayton, and is extremely beautiful. The chandeliers glitter and the stained window glass shine resplendent in their varied colors. Altogether the sacred edifice is a model of perfection and well may the congregation pride themselves in their house of worship.

THE NEW BOOK.

R. L. Polk & Co. Issue Their New Fort Wayne Directory, Giv- the Summit City 37,800 Population.

R. L. Polk & Co. have issued their new directory of Fort Wayne, its business resources and population. The new directory contains fifty-four pages devoted to useful information and the directory proper contains 381 pages of business firms and private individuals. A clasified list of sixty-four pages of business advertisements completes the book, which is the largest and fullest compendium of Fort Wayne ever published. In the introduction the publishers state that "an encouraging increase of population is apparent, and after a careful computation the publishers are able to congratulate the citizens of Fort Wayne on the possession of a population of 37,800, a large increase since the last edition of the directory was published. This fact should be highly gratifying to the citizens of Fort Wayne, and is a tribute to the enterprise and energy of its citizens."

This estimate pushes Fort Wayne close to Evansville and Terre Haute, but not past them, as it is apparent that those cities increased their population.

FIXING THE FIGURES.

The Trustees and Supreme Officers of the Catholic Knights Meet at Indianapols-- Their Business.

The trustees and supreme officers of the Catholic Knights of America are at the Grand hotel, Indianapolis. The officers are as follows: President, Wm. E. Russell, Lebanon, Ky.; secretary, John Barr, Lebanon; treasurer, M. J. O'Brien, Chattanooga. The trustees are J. J. Duffey, Memphis; John H. Swartz, St. Louis; B. G. Eveslage, Cincinnati. The trustees are making their annual examination of the accounts of the officers. The secretary, Mr. Barr, gives some interesting figures respecting the order. It was organized on the assessment plan at Nashville, in 1877. It has now a membership of 14,000, and an assessment yields $11,000. It has paid 624 death benefits in eight years, amounting to $1,200,000. The Indiana membership is 900.

Besides the examination of accounts the trustees will have to examine into the case of James Parker, of St. Louis. Parker held a membership in the order at the time of his death in February last. His policy was at first decided to be good, but the case has been re-opened and an appeal taken to the supreme trustees. Patrick Monahan, president of the Missouri branch of the order is there in behalf of Parker's friends, while John J. Lane, Conrad Yulke, C. E. Melaner and John P. Fletcher, of St. Louis, will appear before the trustees and show, if possible, that Parker was not a member in full standing. The case is of national interest to the order, as no similar one has ever occurred.

Rev. A. W. Lamport.

Rev. Mr. Lamport, formerly pastor of the Wayne street M. E. church, of this city, preached his first sermon at Central avenue church, Indianapolis, on Sunday. It will be pleasing to his many friends in this city to know of his success. The Indianapolis Journal says: "His first sermon and service made a deep and satisfactory impression upon the church and congregation. He speaks without notes; his diction is choice; he uses illustration and anecdote with good effect, and while simple and entertaining, does not descend from the plane of the greatest seriousness. He seems to possess those special qualifications which adapt a man to be a valuable pastor, uniting with them, however, abilities which make him strong and attractive in pulpit work—a combination not always found, even in the best equipped and most popular minister. Mr. Lamport will easily take and maintain a place in the front rank of the Indianapolis ministry."

Mrs. Woodworth Returns to Indiana.

Mrs. Maria Woodworth, the trance specialist, appeared in the Indianapolis Blackford Street Methodist church Sunday night, and obtained permission to make an announcement. She said she and her husband had just arrived in the city. They had intended to spend the winter in Memphis, but the climate did not agree with her. She knew Indianapolis was a wicked city, and she thought, with the aid of other Christians, she would be able to do some good. Her tabernacle, she said, would arrive some time during the week, and she would begin services as soon as it was erected. She did not know how long they would continue, perhaps throughout the winter. She is the guest of the Weddell house.

United at Sheldon.

Married, at the bride's home, in Sheldon, on Thursday, Oct. 8, Mr. George McDowell and Miss Mary Woods, Rev. H. L. Watson officiating. A bountiful repast, prepared by the bride's mother and sisters, was partaken of, and on the following day the many friends of the happy pair enjoyed a sumptuous dinner at the home of the groom. They received many valuable presents from thier friends.

Over the Road.

Henry Brady and Richard Schephard, the fellows who stole two revolvers from B. W. Rambo's store some days ago, said "We are guilty" to Judge O'Rourke yesterday, and this morning he sentenced them to one year each in the prison north. The men give no account of themselves and their relatives will hear nothing of their fate and may be mourn them as dead.

Truth is stranger than fiction, and some of the testimonials to the merits o St. Jacobs Oil at first read almost like a romance. But they have all been verified and been the means of inducing thousands of people to use the great conqueror of pain.

Mr. M. V. B. Spencer was able to come down town yesterday.

The Late Wm. Gause.

A meeting of the representatives of the implement manufactories, dealers, commercial travelers, and friends of the late Wm. Gause, state manager for the Empire Harvesting Machine company, who died suddenly at the Barnett house, Logansport, on Saturday evening, was held at the Grand hotel, Indianapolis, Sunday afternoon. Mr. C. E. Manfield was called to the chair, and J. B. Heywood was appointed secretary. Hon. John W. Kern, J. B. Heywood and J.E Jones were appointed a committee on resolutions, and their report was unanimously adopted. A committee of eight was appointed to accompany the remains from Kokomo to Knightstown Tuesday morning. The resolutions spoke feelingly of the deceased and were of a very appropriate nature.

The Fort Wayne Baptist association convened at Churubusco to-day. The association consists of seventeen churches and the program includes an address from G. F. Seely, of the Newspaper Union, on "How Shall We Keep Our Young People in the Sunday School." Mrs. S. A. Northrop will conduct song service and Mr. E. G. Anderson will dwell on the "Bible Class." J. Croy welcomed the assembly, W. H. Carter conducted the black board exercises. O. N. Heaton spoke on "How Shall we Win Our Scholars to Christ." L. A. ROCHESTER, June 1, 1882. "Ten Years ago I was attacked with the most intense and deathly pains in my back and Kidneys.

"Extending to the end of my toes and my brain!

"From agony! ! !

"It took three men to hold me on my bed at times!

"The Doctors tried in vain to relieve me, but to no purpose.

Morphine and other opiates!

"Had no effect!

After two months I was given up to die! ! !

When my wife heard a neighbor tell what Hop Bitters had done for her, she at once got and gave me some. The first dose eased my brain and seemed to go hunting through my system for the pain.

The second dose eased me so much that I slept two hours, something I had not done for two months. In four I had used five bottles, I was well and at work as hard as any man could, for over three weeks; but I worked too hard for my strength, and taking a hard cold, I was taken with the most acute and painful rheumatism all through my system that ever was known.

I called the doctors again, and after several week they left me a cripple on crutches, for life, as they said. I met a friend and told him my case, and he said Hop Bitters had cured him and would me. I pooh'ed at him, but he was so earnest I was induced to use them again.

In less than four weeks I threw away my crutches and went to work lightly and kept on using the bitters for five weeks, until I became as well as any man living and have been so for six years since.

It has also cured my wife, who had been sick for years; and has kept her and my children well and healthy with from two to three bottles per year. There is no need to be sick at all if these bitters are used. J. J. BERK, Ex supervisor.

Freemen Depositing Ballots in Ohio.

A Drizzling Rain Inclines to Cut Down the Vote,

But it is Considered Pretty Fair at Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo.

BATTLE OF BALLOTS.

The Election in Ohio—Raining All Over the State.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election in this city began without any disorder. Up to 10 a. m. no arrests had been made. Two causes contributed to this result—a division of the precincts so that not more than three hundred or four hundred voters are in any one and the rain which prevents crowds from collecting. All the judges are provided with printed lists of what are considered fraudulent registries and the voting is watched with care. Rain is reported almost all over the state last night and today. This will doubtless have the effect to cause a light vote throughout the state.

The rain ceased here between 11 and 12 o'clock, but the sky is not entirely clear. The vote polled at 11 o'clock showed it is fully up to the average. Good order has been maintained though drunken men are to be found about some of the voting places in spite of the state law. Rain was reported in the central and northern parts of the state at noon.

FROM COLUMBUS.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election is passing quietly with indications that a light vote will be polled. It rained all forenoon and it is believed if it should clear away the main part of the vote will be gotten out during the afternoon. Some scratching is being done on local and legislative tickets, but work of this kind it is thought will not be formidable to either side. Although some precincts were behind on the vote at noon, it is thought at that hour that half of the city has been polled. Neither state committee has any information of consequence except that rain is general and a fair vote is being polled at Toledo where the republicans claim Foraker will carry the county.

AT CLEVELAND.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 13.—The election is progressing in a very orderly manner. There has been no disturbances and the new registry law seems to be a great success. Fraud is lessened and a big vote is being polled. The morning was wet and disagreeable, but notwithstanding it the electors turned out in great numbers. The democrats and republicans both claim the day.

AT COSHOCTON.

COSHOCTON, Ohio, Oct. 13.—A rainy day and light vote up to noon. The prohibitionists gain slightly in this city. The republican candidates for treasurer, sheriff and infirmary directors run ahead of the ticket and may pull through. The balance of the democratic ticket will probably have a small majority.

A FEW FACTS.

State officers, judges of the supreme court and a legislature will be chosen in Ohio to-day. The democrats, republicans, prohibitionists and greenbackers have full tickets in the field.

In 1881 three candidates were in the field for governor: Hoadly, democrat; Foraker, republican, and Schumacher, prohibitionist. The vote was as follows:

Hoadly	[illegible]
Foraker	[illegible]
Schumacher	[illegible]
Hoadly's majority	[illegible]

In the October election, 1884, the republicans carried Ohio, giving Robinson 11,324 votes over Hoadly, but not a majority of the votes cast. In November, 1884, Blaine carried Ohio by 15,351 majority.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 13. The president to-day appointed Chas. H. Cole collector of customs for the district of Superior, Michigan.

TIMBER SPOILATION ON THE PUBLIC DOMAIN.

A letter has just been received by Commissioner Sparks from M. J. Haley, special trustee agent, dated general land office, Rathdrum, Idaho, in which he says:

"I have the honor to report that I have completed the reports in the Northern Pacific Railroad company, and the Montana Improvement company's timber trespass cases and herewith transmit eight reports, making with what I have already transmitted, thirty-one separate indictments in all, showing that these corporations have caused to be cut from the public domain 4,510, 00 feet of lumber and bridge timber, 84,744 railroad ties, 15, 400,000 shingles (616,000 bunches) 32,-635 cords of wood and 20,000 cedar posts.

To value the lumber at $10 per 1000 feet, which would be low figures, the railroad ties at 10c per tie, the wood at $3 per cord, the posts at $80.00 per 1000, and the shingles at $2 per 1000, or 50 a bunch, the total would amount to $613,402.

A FEW NICE PLUMS.

The president has appointed the following postmasters: Samuel W. Peacock, Lancaster, Kentucky, vice H. W. Anderson commission expired; W. W. Wathen, Lebanon, Kentucky, vice A. B. Hilpp, commission expired; Richmond S. Demont, Illinois, surveyor general of the territory of Utah.

Two of the party were young women and the children were about fifteen years of age. All of them leave farms as good as any in this section. They were converted and baptized here last spring by Mormon missionaries, who have been industriously working in this and Richland counties. The female portion of the party uphold polygamy and all talk as if expecting to practice it. The converts had previously been Methodists and Presbyterians. Their standing here has made their departure a sensation. The converts have been egged and otherwise maltreated since their baptism into the Mormon faith. The best men in the county say it is time to stop their work here and if the missionaries return they may be mobbed.

ILLINOIS leads all the States in railroad mileage. It has 9,908 miles; Pennsylvania, 7,540; Iowa, 7,510; New York, 7,335; Ohio, 7,276; Texas, 6,198; Indiana, 5,534; Michigan, 5,223; and Missouri, 4,709. These are the nine great railroad States. All of the New England States have together 6,307 miles of railway.

AT a general assembly of the Knights of Labor, in session at Hamilton, Ont., delegates who have been soldiers of the federal and confederate armies formed an organization to be known as "The Gray and Blue of the Knights of Labor," the object being to promote peace instead of war, and to establish the sentiment among the ranks of the rank and file, that peace, not war, is the toiler's emancipation.

THE election in Ohio to-day is favorable to democratic success, inasmuch as Hoadly defeated Foraker at a former election. The municipal election at Indianapolis also attracts attention. There the republicans have a majority. Both campaigns were conducted on a "whisky" platform and that sort of campaign material is just a little tiresome. Liquor dealers should obey the existing laws and drive the question from public attention. A political party cannot certainly hope to survive long on a purely "whisky" plat. Personal liberty is all right, but it is not all we live for. A little law and order is not bad.

PROVIDENCE has been paying for following some good advice on the subject of buying clothing, the prevalence of which has recently been traced to an intemperate use of whisky. Sue Dunn in Kildare, Ireland, has suffered, in terms of the highest praise, to Archbishop Walsh and Croke. The former, he said, was one of the strongest supporters that Providence had given Ireland, while Archbishop Croke's services were known to all. The steps they have taken proved the union of the priest and the people. In regard to boycotting, he said the practice was pursued independent of the Irish leaders; it dead, they'd skivored it and regarded it as barbarous and somebodyic.

A DOWNTOWN society gentleman of Indianapolis was for a few days the guest of Hon. Horace P. Biddle, and returned with a glowing report of that gentleman's life and surroundings. The old judge devotes his time to study and comfort, and is represented as the favorite of all his neighbors, old and young. He owns a library of about 10,000 volumes, and in it may be found all early documents pertaining to Indiana, as well as a perfect file of the leading papers and periodicals of the country. The judge's latest love fad is on a new stringed instrument, from which he extracts very beautiful music. He has also just finished a very learned essay upon the literature of Prussia. The judge is very fond of society, and especially that of young people, and it is his habit, whenever he becomes lonesome, to elevate an immense lamp at the top of a high pole erected in the center of his island, which is a signal for all his friends to call, that his house will be open.

The warm weather often has a depressing and debilitating effect. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes all languor and lassitude.

PROFESSIONAL beauty on the Pacific coast finds lucrative employment as a pretended illustration of the merits of a patent medicine. A wonderfully lovely young woman travels in the chariot of a vender of medicine, which, he declares, caused the perfection of her complexion. He sells a tonic, too, to which he attributes the abundance of her hair, and drugs for the increase or reduction of flesh to her standard.

A DIFFERENCE OF $39,999

From Indianapolis News.

Surely it would seem that such an amount as this is worth saving. General Grant's physicians are talking about $40,000 as the proper figure for their medical services. At the very out set it was criticised as being some dollars in excess of what the services were probably worth.

Exactly how much these medical gentlemen have done for Grant, it is beyond the power of human knowledge to say. They probably did the best they could and when they found he did not die, as they said he would, they, with a re found wisdom, announced that he did not die then, he would die some other time and that it was only a question of time. The same is true of everybody, sick or well, and it does not require a great deal of medical knowledge to see it.

But suppose they had given General Grant a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, which would have come to just one dollar. It might have done him quite as much good as all the treatment he has had. Certainly it would have worried him and pained him less. And then think of the saving! A matter of $39,999.

A great many people are now attending to their own cases instead of employing expensive physicians. This is not because they lack respect for the physicians; but because they sometimes find the physicians a little uncertain as well as costly, and from increasingly happy experience of the general public, they find that Brown's Iron Bitters can always be relied upon.

For instance, the case of a gentleman well known in Indianapolis. Mr. C. J. Loor, salesman for Fred Shrader, the popular boot and shoe dealer, of 65 West Washington street. He has a good constitution and a cheerful disposition. What did Mr. Loor do when a few months ago he found himself a dyspeptic? Did he engage costly physicians to give him a daily diagnosis and to prescribe for him medicines the titles of which had to be written out for the druggist in dog latin, for fear the patient might know what stuff it was that he was taking? Got he. He did better than that.

The writer had the pleasure of calling on Mr. Loor. That gentleman said, in response to queries as to dyspepsia and its cure: "I had been enjoying good health until some time ago I found myself running into a dyspeptic condition. My food would not digest with comfort and I had much oppression and pain after each meal. I was not laid aside from my business here, but I think I ought to have been: for I was dragging myself into a daily martyrdom of pain and bad feeling. It was about three months ago that for just an experiment I tried Brown's Iron Bitters. I had heard of it among some of my friends, doing them good. I have no longer any dyspeptic symptoms, for this medicine has taken the whole thing away. It is the finest tonic I ever knew. I keep it in the house and still take it, and I would not on any account be without it."

Mr. Loor is just as well to-day as if he had spent $10,000 on physicians, and probably he is better with the satisfaction, besides, of having saved big money. His recovery from the evils of dyspepsia affords a valuable hint to all invalids who are spending their money in vain, who have not yet made trial of Brown's Iron Bitters.

At 94 Michigan avenue, the writer called on Mrs. Newton, wife of Engineer Newton. She too had been suffering from dyspepsia, and from a disordered liver, and had, foster fool going to the doctor, pursued the plan of using Brown's Iron Bitters. "The result," said she, "was all I could have desired or expected. I am all right now, and Brown's Iron Bitters made me so."

This way of getting cured is as simple as it is reliable. The cost is small; the process is easy, and the result is delightful. Brown's Iron Bitters, which you can buy on its genuine merits of any druggist, cures dyspepsia, headache, nervous prostration, debility, pains in the back, liver troubles, and many of the ailments which are peculiar to ladies. It is the best and the most popular of all family tonics, its popularity being based on actual merit.

Sweden has become the fashionable hunting-ground of Europe.

Miss Lillie Curtis, an accomplished young lady of Bellevue, Pa., some months ago thought she was doomed to die. In a short time she was reduced from a handsome, blooming, healthy girl to the mere shadow of her former self. Dyspepsia was her complaint, and everything was tried to restore her to health but without avail. The doctors were baffled. Then a friend informed them of a marvelous cure that had been effected in a neighboring town by Mishler's Herb Bitters. Some of the medicine was purchased by Mr. Curtis, and in a few months he had the pleasure of seeing his daughter restored to health and beauty.

Frightful Case

Of a Colored Man!

I contracted a fearful case of blood poison in 1861. I was treated by some of the best physicians in Atlanta. They used the old remedies of mercury and potash, which brought on rheumatism and impaired my digestive organs. Every joint in me was swollen and full of pain. I was in a horrible condition; when I had been given up to die by physicians, who had seen the workings of the medicine in other cases, thought it would be a splendid time to test the virtues of Swift's Specific. When I commenced taking S. S. S. the physician said I could not live two weeks under the ordinary treatment. He commenced to give me the medicine strictly according to directions, which I took for several months. I took nothing else, and commenced to improve from the first. Occasionally I would have a backset from imprudence. Soon rheumatism left me, my appetite became all right, and the ulcers, which the doctor said were the most frightful he had ever seen, began to heal, and by the first of October, 1884, I was a well man again. I am stronger now than I ever was before, and weigh more. I have not failed to report for duty since that time, being engaged in the old warehouse of Chase & Carley Company, have been, and still am, doing some of the hardest work any man ever did, and am ready to answer any question that may be asked concerning this cure. Swift's Specific has saved me from an early grave.

LEM MCCORMICK.

Atlanta, Ga., April 18, 1885.

Lem McCormick has been in the employ of the Chase Carley Company for some years, and I know the above statements to be true. At the time he began taking Swift's Specific he was in a horrible condition, and at my solicitation his treatment with S. S. S. was undertaken by a physician after several others had declared his case to be hopelessly incurable. He took nothing but S. S. S., and has been as sound as a new dollar for several months. I regard his cure almost miraculous.

A LAND ALMOST UNKNOWN.

On the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad.

A TRIP TO THE ZUNI COUNTRY.

Hospitality of the Civilized Indians and a Visit to the Cliff Dwellings.

THEY WERE WINTER HABITATIONS.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., May 15.—The completion of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad between Albuquerque and the Needles opens a tract of country heretofore little known and difficult of access. Enormous canons, deep craters, towering palisades, and widespread lava beds may be seen from windows of the cars. The tourist should spend at least two days at Albuquerque, and visit the old town about two miles from the depot. It is easily reached by the street cars. The old adobe church, a veritable antique still in daily use, is well worth a visit. A visit to the Indian school, a mile farther out, will be well repaid. The school is supported in part by the Government and conducted by the Presbyterian Board. It numbers about seventy pupils, and appears to be well conducted.

ADOBE COMMUNAL DWELLING.

Taking a train for the west, we soon come in view of the pueblo or village of Laguna, to the right of the railroad, and built upon a rocky eminence without verdure of any kind. The adobe communal dwelling, two and three stories high, is accessible by ladders. There are no doors upon the ground floor. It is a strange sight, and the strange people who swarm about the dwelling, partially dressed in buckskin and blankets of their own manufacture, form a picture not soon to be forgotten and sure to create a desire to know more of their customs and their ancestors.

A few miles farther on we reach McCarty's Station. The pueblo of Acoma is twelve miles from this station. It is one of the most accessible and interesting in New Mexico. Mounted upon an Indian pony, we galloped over hill and plain until we reached the Acoma valley. It is a wide canon from two to three miles wide. Its sides are almost perpendicular, with here and there narrow defiles and trails, by which we descended 200 feet into the valley. Upon an elevated rock, standing isolated in the plain, is built the pueblo of Acoma. As it is built of adobe, it is with difficulty that it can be distinguished from the gray rock which it crowns. We dismounted and led our ponies down to the plain. At the base of the cliff a large spring of good water awaits the thirsty traveler. After watering the ponies we remounted and galloped across the plain. Drawing near to the pueblo, we found several great monuments or pillars, isolated from the main pile upon which the village is built. They measure from thirty to eighty feet in diameter, and are from 100 to 200 feet high. These great columns are sandstone. They are fast disintegrating and wasting away. Upon a similar eminence with a level top of about two acres, is built the pueblo. Excepting on the southern side, the walls are so nearly perpendicular as to be inaccessible. The sand drifts badly on the southern side, and reaches half way up the cliff. Over the hot sand we climbed until we reached a narrow trail leading to the top. The path is only wide enough for one animal. In some places steps have been cut in the rock to secure a foothold.

From the plateau we had an extended view up and down the valley for many miles. The towering monuments below looked like sentries on guard at the entrance of this strange village. The original builders, we are told, selected this site that they might the more easily defend their homes. In the plain broken patches of beans, corn and pumpkins were seen. The iron age has not reached this people yet. The most primitive wooden plough is still in use, and a sharp stick is used in planting the seed. Large flocks of sheep and goats were quietly grazing there, guarded by

KNOWING NOT WHERE WATER IS, I BROUGHT IT FROM THE POOL.

Indian boys and girls. A few cattle were in sight. In the evening about 100 "burros" were driven up the narrow trail and carefully corralled in an old adobe churchyard, built about 100 years ago by Romish priests. In a corner of the church our guide had a few goods stowed for trade. We camped in the churchyard. The natives welcomed us warmly.

Their dress and absence of dress did not impress us favorably, and the prevailing fashion of hanging the hair gave their plain, honest faces an ominous appearance. Their greeting was kind and courteous. A woman brought us a jar of water, saying, "I saw you coming over the plain. Knowing that you would want water when you got here, I went to the pool and brought it for you." When you here that she had to go in the hot sun nearly half a mile down the steep, rough rocks to reach the pool, and that the jar held two gallons of water, you can appreciate her act.

I cannot here detail the manners and customs of these people. I found them using several implements, duplicates of which have been found in the graves of the Mound Builders. I saw them grinding corn to a fine flour by rubbing it upon a large stone with a smaller hand stone. I saw the women spinning wool, twisting it with a stick or spindle, weighted with a small disk exactly like those that have been found in Mound Builders' graves in Missouri. The common, rough, discoidal stone quoits were used to crush pumpkin seed for food. In making pottery they use a soft stone, which they reduce to fine powder in the same way and with the same utensils used in grinding their corn. Adding water, they form a puffy or clay. They take a mass of this puffy in globular form and place it upon a small flat stone. Then, with the fingers, they form the bowl, raising the walls by pressure, and smoothing the sides with a small, smooth pebble, which they frequently wet. When the pot is formed it is partially dried in the sun, and then painted in mixed colors, which are pulverized in stone mortars, and applied with brushes made from the fibre of the yucca. When ready to bake, the vessel is set upon a rock in the open air, and pieces of dried manure are piled around and over it. The pile is fired, and the whole is soon brought to the color of a live coal. Then the coals are removed, and the vessel is rolled away from the fire to cool. It is then ready for use. These utensils are made in a variety of forms and sizes, and for domestic use. Some are nearly as large as a barrel.

Raising sheep and corn, grinding grain by hand for food, spinning wool and weaving it into blankets for clothing, and making pottery are the principal occupations of this people. Their implements, we could not expect to find more than we do, since in the moist country everything but stone and pottery decays. We find among all prehistoric remains ornaments and implements of shell and stones with neatly drilled holes. The question is often asked, how could they drill them so correctly?

NATIVES MAKING POTTERY.

At a Acoma I saw the process. An Indian was making shell beads. He first broke the shell into rough pieces of small size. The drill was a piece of hard wood formed like an arrow, straight and smooth, about fifteen inches long by half an inch in diameter. A bit of hard stone was fastened in one end. Two strings, about ten inches long, were attached to the other end of the drill. They are tied to each end of a stick an inch wide and eight inches long, in the centre of which is a hole large enough to receive the drill. Through this hole the drill is put. Then being held in an upright position and revolved by the fingers, the strings are wound around the drill and the crossbar raised toward the top of the drill shaft. The machine is now ready for use. Setting the drill securely upon the piece of shell, and holding the drill steady at the top, the operator seizes the crossbar in his fingers, pressing it quickly downward. The strings on the shaft unwind, causing the drill to revolve rapidly. Then, loosing the crossbar, the strings rewind upon the shaft, and another downward motion causes it to revolve rapidly in the opposite direction. In this way a constant rapid revolving of the drill soon makes a round, smooth hole. This is evidently one of the ways in which the prehistoric people drilled stones.

Passing westward from Acoma and McCarty's Station, we left Mt. Taylor on the north. It is snow capped and 13,000 feet high. The strange geological formation of the country excites wonder and admiration. Near Grant's Station the road winds among lava beds, walled in by black and ragged ridges of lava. Lonely hordes, with few cattle, are seen near the watercourses. A stray wolf or an antelope reminded us that animal life is not extinct on this lonely plain. As we approach the continental divide the valley opened southward into elevated plains, covered with a stunted but sparse growth of cedar as far as the eye could see. The road runs along the northern side of this plain. A constant succession of red and gray buttes or palisades were on the right. They had green caps, and white ribbons marked their faces. Here and there isolated masses stood alone on the plain, with huge boulders jested on their tops.

From the summit of the divide we looked over the Pacific slope. The train rushed down the slope at the rate of fifty miles an hour. At Gallup we stopped for dinner. Ten miles further on we left the train at Wingate, and, taking a seat in the Government mail wagon, soon reached the fort, three miles from the station. This post is upon a mountain slope which overlooks a wide expanse of broken country. A towering rock, known as "The Navajo Church," is its prominent feature.

At Gallup station we were surprised to see lines of cars loaded with coal, mined here at the rate of 200 tons per day. At Holbrook a poster marked the progress of civilization. It read:

All persons carrying arms in this town must immediately divest themselves of all weapons, or subject themselves to arrest or punishment according to law.

Sixty miles further west we dashed over the Canon Diablo, a fearful chasm in the level plain, 222 feet deep and 540 feet wide, spanned by an iron bridge. The remorseless advertiser has already disfigured the walls of this canon with his paint brush.

Thirty miles farther on we came to Flagstaff, a brisk little village nestled under the shadow of the San Francisco Mountains. It takes its name from a pole which a pioneer has set near his cabin. We were then in a delightful country, about the same altitude as the city of Mexico. Snow covered mountains, 13,000 feet high, cooled the heated atmosphere below. Beautiful natural parks, covered with a rich growth of gramma grass, were skirted by a handsome growth of heavy yellow pine timber. An eastern firm has built a sawmill here and is shipping lumber to Los Angeles and to Mexico. A drive of eight miles southeast from Flagstaff brought us to an enormous canon, into which we descended by a rough pathway. We reached a ledge about half way to the bottom. Turning to the left we saw the famous cliff dwellings. Across the deep chasm, up and down the canon on either side, and as far as the windings of the canon will permit, we saw these queer human habitations. After looking at the walls we dug with shovel and trowel in the earthen floors, hoping to find something. A lower ledge varies in width from three to twenty-five feet, and upon the wider spaces the dwellings are located. A rough wall of clay, extending to the ledge above, forms the front and two ends of the primitive dwellings, a doorway being 1.9 in the front wall. The rocky ceilings are blackened by smoke and the crevices in the upper part of the walls are filled with pitch condensed from the smoke, which must have filled the room, as there was no chimney to facilitate its escape. The fires were built against the rear walls. The most noticeable articles found in digging were a few implements, fragments of pottery, fabrics woven of cotton and wool, a spindle whorl of wood, a sandal of the fibre of the yucca, a cushion used upon the head for the carrying of burdens, and a small wooden bench fastened with a stone axe. All the articles found are now in daily use among the Pueblo Indians. On the plains in the vicinity are remains of stone walls, probably dwellings, about which we found grindstones and broken pottery in abundance, which corresponds exactly to those found in the cave dwellings near by. There is satisfactory evidence that the people who inhabited these plains and left these ruins of stone dwellings and pottery were the same people who occupied the cliff dwellings, and that they were identical with the Pueblos. They certainly raised sheep and corn, and spun both wool and cotton. I saw no evidences of their being a warlike people. The cliff dwellings were not adapted for defense from enemies, but were more comfortable in winter, as they were protected from cold and winds. They certainly could not have been convenient for common use as the dwellings on the plains. I believe that they were simply a winter resort for those who lived in the plains in summer.

About eight miles northeast of Flagstaff, isolated in the plain, stands a mountain about 300 feet high. On the south front, extending down the side about 100 feet, the volcanic rock is filled with great cavities, globular in form, like what is known among furnace men as the blowholes in pig iron, or the slag of the furnace. These cavities vary in size from six to twenty-five feet in diameter. All have circular openings, most of which must have been approached by a short ladder of steps. In many instances these openings are protected on the upper side by a rough circular wall, built half way round the opening. I counted about twenty of these openings in close proximity, all of which had evidently been inhabited. Stone implements and pottery similar to those which we found in the cliff dwellings were discovered. In almost every cave there was at least one grindstone or metate. In all instances, however, they were broken, and, evidently, broken intentionally. In some instances the circular walls protecting the upper sides of these openings had been thrown into the openings. Several had been a long time filled up and undisturbed. There was silent evidence that an enemy had done this.

If ague or insanity is latent in a person it will almost always develop itself itself at sea. So Dr. Fourness-Brice concludes after studying the subject as it is revealed in the records of North Atlantic emigrant travel. Curious enough, in nearly every case the patient has been ailing, and has been recommended by his medicinal attendants to "try a sea voyage."

Some People Snore Somnously.

Why do some people snore? Some because they are thoughtless. Some because they sleep with their mouths open. Some because their digestive system is in bad condition. Brown's Iron Bitters will not shut anybody's mouth; but it will rectify bad digestion, and produce solid comfort and consequently delightful sleep. Mr. H. P. Smith, Montgomery, Ala., writes, "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for weakness and night sweats, and it cured me."

NEW HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

The Members of the First Presbyterian Church Hold an Important Meeting—A Report on Business.

Pursuant to a call the members of the First Presbyterian church met in the lecture room of their new edifice, on the corner of Washington and Clinton streets, last night, to take steps looking towards the completion of their grand structure. The meeting was called to order and Mr. O. P. Morgan was made chairman and Hon. Fred J. Hayden, secretary. The financial report of the trustees was submitted and read by Hon. Montgomery Hamilton. The report shows the total cost of the building, including organ, painting, frescoing, heating apparatus, gas fixtures, carpets, church furniture pictures, etc., (not including the cost of the construction of the grand spire contemplated) will amount to near $80,000, and when all available assets are accounted for will leave the congregation in debt about $8,000. The money so far raised came entirely from the members of the church and a desire was expressed not to solicit outside aid, and for that reason a resolution was introduced, which had been adopted by the trustees, subject to approval of the entire congregation, to empower the trustees to negotiate a loan from the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, of Milwaukee, for the sum of $20,000, to run for ten years, but payable in three if desired by the members. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

The board of trustees then drew up a resolution, which was heartily endorsed, returning thanks to the congregation of the Jewish synagogue and also to the members of the Second Presbyterian church for the use of its Sunday school room. Other resolutions were read and adopted.

The assembly then repaired to the church where the handsome interior was viewed by gas light. The frescoeing is from the brush of J. Chas. Haase, of Dayton, and is extremely beautiful. The chandeliers glitter and the stained window glass shine resplendent in their varied colors. Altogether the sacred edifice is a model of perfection and well may the congregation pride themselves in their house of worship.

THE NEW BOOK.

R. L. Polk & Co. Issue Their New Fort Wayne Directory, Giving the Summit City 37,800 Population.

R. L. Polk & Co. have issued their new directory of Fort Wayne, its business resources and population. The new directory contains fifty-four pages devoted to useful information and the directory proper contains 381 pages of business firms and private individuals. A classified list of sixty-four pages of business advertisements completes the book, which is the largest and fullest compendium of Fort Wayne ever published. In the introduction the publishers state that "an encouraging increase of population is apparent, and after a careful computation the publishers are able to congratulate the citizens of Fort Wayne on the possession of a population of 37,800, a large increase since the last edition of the directory was published. This fact should be highly gratifying to the citizens of Fort Wayne, and is a tribute to the enterprise and energy of its citizens."

This estimate pushes Fort Wayne close to Evansville and Terre Haute, but not past them, as it is apparent that those cities increased their population.

FIXING THE FIGURES.

The Trustees and Supreme Officers of the Catholic Knights Meet at Indianapolis—Their Business.

The trustees and supreme officers of the Catholic Knights of America are at the Grand hotel, Indianapolis. The officers are as follows: President, Wm. E. Russell, Lebanon, Ky.; secretary, John Barr, Lebanon; treasurer, M. J. O'Brien, Chattanooga. The trustees are J. J. Dailey, Memphis, John H. Swartz, St. Louis; B. O. Everlage, Cincinnati. The trustees are making their annual examination of the accounts of the officers. The secretary, Mr. Barr, gives some interesting figures respecting the order. It was organized on the assessment plan at Nashville, in 1877. It has now a membership of 14,000, and an assessment yields $11,000. It has paid 624 death benefits in eight years, amounting to $1,200,000. The Indiana membership is 900.

Besides the examination of accounts the trustees will have to examine into the case of James Parker, of St. Louis. Parker held a membership in the order at the time of his death in February last. His policy was at first decided to be good, but the case has been re-opened and an appeal taken to the supreme trustees. Patrick Monahan, president of the Missouri branch of the order is there in behalf of Parker's friends, while John J. Lane, Conrad Yulke, C. E. Meisner and John P. Fletcher, of St. Louis, will appear before the trustees and show, if possible, that Parker was not a member in full standing. The case is of national interest to the order, as no similar one has ever occurred.

Rev. A. W. Lamport.

Rev. Mr. Lamport, formerly pastor of the Wayne street M. E. church, of this city, preached his first sermon at Central avenue church, Indianapolis, on Sunday. It will be pleasing to his many friends in this city to know of his success. The Indianapolis Journal says: "His first sermon and service made a deep and satisfactory impression upon the church and congregation. He speaks without notes; his diction is choice; he uses illustration and anecdote with good effect, and while simple and entertaining, does not descend from the plane of the greatest seriousness. He seems to possess those special qualifications which adapt a man to be a valuable pastor, uniting with them, however, abilities which make him strong and attractive in pulpit work—a combination not always found, even in the best equipped and most popular minister. Mr. Lamport will easily take and maintain a place in the front rank of the Indianapolis ministry."

Mrs. Woodworth Returns to Indiana.

Mrs. Maria Woodworth, the trance specialist, appeared in the Indianapolis Blackford Street Methodist church Sunday night, and obtained permission to make an announcement. She said she and her husband had just arrived in the city. They had intended to spend the winter in Memphis, but the climate did not agree with her. She knew Indianapolis was a wicked city, and she thought, with the aid of other Christians, she would be able to do some good. Her tabernacle, she said, would arrive some time during the week, and she would begin services as soon as it was erected. She did not know how long they would continue, perhaps throughout the winter. She is the guest of the Weddell house.

United at Sheldon.

Married, at the bride's home, in Sheldon, on Thursday, Oct. 8, Mr. George McDowell and Miss Mary Woods, Rev. H. L. Watson officiating. A bountiful repast, prepared by the bride's mother and sisters, was partaken of, and on the following day the many friends of the happy pair enjoyed a sumptuous dinner at the home of the groom. They received many valuable presents from thier friends.

Over the Road.

Henry Brady and Richard Schephard, the fellows who stole two revolvers from B. W. Rambo's store some days ago, said "We are guilty" to Judge O'Rourke yesterday, and this morning he sentenced them to one year each in the prison north.
